Los Angeles Kicks Off the Coast-to-Coast Campaign

John Schulman '64 leaned casually against a podium emblazoned with the familiar WB crest, ready to launch a fund-raising drive for his old alma mater. He stood not far from the table where Humphrey Bogart signed his original contract with Warner Bros. studio, in the commissary famous for the movie stars, directors and deal-makers that have regularly eaten there throughout decades of Hollywood heyday.

For Schulman, it may have been just the dining room of the company where he has worked for over 20 years (a rarity itself in Hollywood), and where he is now an executive vice president and general counsel. For his audience, some 40 SFS alumni from the 1940s through the 2000s, the glamour of Hollywood paled next to the legacy that they shared and their goal: to help raise the final $12 million in the School's capital fund-raising effort.

Schulman seemed to speak for everyone when he said Sidwell Friends remains close to his heart; then he told them to enjoy themselves, because soon they'd have to buckle down to work on behalf of the school.

The crowd obliged the order to have fun, mingling, sipping wine and nibbling hors d'oeuvres while discussing the dramatic transformation of their alma mater in the last few years. Even the young alumni from 2003 wouldn't recognize the new fourth through seventh grade middle school (which some of the alumni had visited but most had not). They were eager to hear about the new building and the school's other substantial construction projects.

Head of School Bruce Stewart was the man of the moment when he stood to explain to the gathering that SFS will follow its platinum-certified Middle School with a new athletic facility as well as a renovated and expanded arts teaching and exhibition center. The projects are intertwined, he pointed out, since only by moving the gyms, locker rooms, coaching and training spaces to a new, state-of-the-art athletic facility will room free up for the expanded arts center. But the School desperately needs to update the amenities for both programs, meaning enough funding for both must be raised. Stewart explained that in addition to these ambitious plans for improved educational programs, the School hopes to add a Quaker meeting house to the campus for the first time.

So with less than $12 million to go before it reaches its $56 million goal, SFS is turning now to more than 5,000 alumni across the country. Schulman and his co-chair, Sally Willcox '81, hope to raise at least $300,000 before the end of summer from nearly 200 alumni living in the Southern California region.

Schulman and Willcox are not alone in their effort; they'll have the help of a half dozen L.A. area alumni volunteers. Their job is to inform fellow alumni of the reasons for Sidwell Friends' construction plans, to answer questions, update them on the campaign and its progress, and encourage them to pledge support in any way they can.

Los Angeles is the first of five planned regional fund-raising committees. The New York and San Francisco committees will begin

MORE THAN 900 PEOPLE HAVE TOURED THE NEW MIDDLE SCHOOL, AMONG THEM NEARLY 100 FROM GRADUATED PARENTS, A GROUP FOR FAMILIES WHOSE LAST CHILD HAS GRADUATED FROM SIDWELL. BARB THOMPSON, SHELLEY ROBINSON, SANDEY GOODBODY (WITH LEED SEAL), HEAD OF SCHOOL BRUCE STEWART, ANDY BERRY, AND FORMER MS PRINCIPAL GWENELL BASS TOURED WITH EIGHTH GRADE GUIDES.

Pursuing Excellence

Dear Friends,

By now, most of us know that the Middle School has been formally awarded platinum certification by the U.S. Green Building Council. Even though that honor occurred two months ago, in March, I can't help but reflect on the evening that the award was first announced. That night, the Middle School was officially dedicated with a ribbon-cutting and reception marking the countless hours of hard work by an untold number of individuals. The ceremony also represented what Sidwell Friends is all about—coming together as a community to participate as the School takes the lead in an area that is important not only for our students, but for the world as a whole.

We continue to seek excellence in everything we do. The Call Us Friends Campaign is no exception. Its purpose is to provide an unparalleled learning environment for our students, so they are prepared to tackle the challenges of the future. It will ensure that faculty salaries remain competitive, so that we attract and retain talented teachers like those we are fortunate to already have. It supports financial aid, so the School is accessible to lower and middle income families. And it will fulfill our promise to future generations that Sidwell Friends School will continue to be the extraordinary institution that first opened nearly 125 years ago.

Construction of a new Middle School was only the first realization of that promise. We have much more to accomplish at SFS. Students will attend a renovated and expanded Lower School in September. Before that, however, the Board of Trustees will decide on the scope and locations on the Wisconsin Avenue campus of a new athletic facility, renovated arts facilities, and a Quaker meeting house. I'm proud to say that we need less than $12 million to reach our original campaign goal of $56 million. We're that close! I'm certain that the Friends community will be as supportive of our next projects as it was to the critical need for a new Middle School.

Please join me in making our aspirations a reality. We cannot succeed without the participation of every member of the Sidwell Friends School community. I look forward to sharing more news about the campaign at the start of the school year. Until then, thank you for all you do to make the SFS community so unique.

Sincerely,

Joshua Bernstein '81

work in the fall, and they'll be followed soon after by groups in Boston and Chicago. Like L.A., the other cities will be led by local alumni committee chairs and volunteers who will be close at hand to help alumni in each area get involved in the campaign.

The Call Us Friends Campaign is lead by nearly 30 volunteer committee chairs. Among them are three alumni who co-chair the Alumni Leadership and Regional Gifts initiative. Their goal is to expand the campaign to fellow alumni living across the country.

George Bernstein '64

George Bernstein '64 knows that academic institutions are beholden to alumni for their financial support. As Interim Dean of the School of Liberal Arts at Tulane University in New Orleans, he was familiar with that lesson even before Hurricane Katrina devastated Tulane. He knows it's true at Sidwell Friends, too, even though wealth is often perceived as a hallmark of the school.

Bernstein understands that Sidwell Friends actually ranks lower than its sister schools in endowment and donations to its annual funds. His efforts to change that began in 2000, with a drive that raised $10 million for endowment. The endeavor proved that SFS could mobilize its community around a substantial campaign.

"We knew that this current campaign was a big, big stretch for us," Bernstein remembers, "but we felt confident we had the parent and alumni base."

The goals originally emerged from the Board of Trustees strategic plan of 1998 and the master plan for the campus of 2002. The first priority of the strategic plan was raising money for "faculty salaries and other things to improve faculty retention and morale, and to build up the endowment," says Bernstein, who has two older brothers, Daniel '55 and Alan '59. The success of that effort convinced the Board that a major campaign was possible. Members set a goal of $56 million, with $30 million earmarked for endowment and for faculty salaries, benefits and professional development, and the rest for the glaring needs among the school's buildings.

"This is far more ambitious, and the amount of money we're talking about is way beyond any goal we've set before," Bernstein says. So far, the school has raised $44

George Marcou '75

George Marcou '75 believes that every contribution in support of Sidwell Friends is critical, regardless of the amount. But he wants alumni to understand that their dollars are worth more than just cash to the school.

"First, anything is appreciated," Marcou stresses. "Second, there are large gift-giving foundations and organizations that have triggers based on overall participation."

That means that when an organization applies to a foundation for a grant or other funding, one measure of its worthiness is reflected in how many of its own community have stepped up with their own money.

"If you are the Gates Foundation, or Foundation X," Marcou explains, "one thing you will ask is, 'if your charity or school is so great, what is your overall percentage of participation?' Even a modest amount helps us with our overall percentages. Large foundations will look to that parameter in determining what level they will support."

"A good way to put it is that every dollar counts, and every percentage point counts," says Marcou, a lawyer and partner with Kilpatrick Stockton. In the School's last major campaign, Friends Stand Up, alumni made up 30 percent of donors who raised a total of $14 million.

million. He's confident it can bring in the remaining $12 million because "there's an alumni base we still haven't tapped.

But the School cannot afford those updates within its existing budget.

"Everyone has an exaggerated view of the resources Sidwell has," Bernstein says.

"Our endowment is still very low compared to any of our peer institutions. We do things that other schools don't – we provide an amazing amount of financial aid, and some of that comes out of endowment, some of it comes out of operating money. The message that we need to get out is that we do these amazing things, and we're not that rich, certainly if rich is measured by endowment."

"Arts and athletics have not been well funded in past campaigns," he says. "But these are real needs, and will make a real difference in what we can offer students, and a real difference in whether we get the students we want. This is not window-dressing."

The School counts seven Marcous among its students – including Marcou's sons, John '18 and George '15. His sister Mary '76 and brothers Andrew '78 and Matthew '81 live in the Washington, D.C. area. A third brother lives overseas.

"My brother John ('74) now lives in Jakarta, Indonesia," Marcou says. "There are Sidwell graduates all over the world. So the regional gift committees are a way to reach people who have moved away and live all over.

"Sidwell is no longer a local thing for them," he continues. "They're removed physically. They've got their own schools that their kids go to. I respect that. What I return to is that there's an element of payback. And we're overdue."

He explains that he wants to be among the first to rectify that.

"Sidwell Friends has played an important role in my life and in my four siblings' lives, and now my two kids' lives," Marcou explains. "I felt that up until recently, the school has done a poor job, candidly, in getting its endowment and physical plant in order. The effort is now payback for everything the school has done for me and my family over the last three decades."

Adam Bernstein '81

Adam Bernstein '81 vividly remembers going to school in the old Middle School—and so do his children, Danielle '10 and Liza '12.

"I went to school there and the building hadn't changed in 30 years," says Bernstein, who has two other children, Brenner '15 and Thea '19. "We learned and did great, but our physical environment hadn't changed in so long. Now the students have an appreciation of their surroundings, and can learn from those surroundings, and that's what I didn't have. But my kids do have it, and I'm proud of that.

"I'm certainly getting the full benefit of the new Middle School for my children," he adds. To return the favor, Bernstein took a leadership position with the alumni regional fund-raising drive that will power the next stages of the School's master plan.

"These plans create an excitement, whether they're for athletic or arts facilities, or a gym or classrooms," says Bernstein, who is president of The Bernstein Companies, a commercial real estate management company. "They're not just new, but innovative. That's especially true of the classroom spaces.

He knows that it's difficult for some alumni to understand the scope of change necessary when they are scattered across the country.

"The regional committees will try to create a sense of community for alumni who are so far away," Bernstein says.

"It's easy to get out there with alumni and say 'we had a great experience,'" he adds. "It's even more special now. As the world and schools become more competitive, we've got to have the facilities to compete for teachers and even for students sometimes. We've got to have the goods."

A Day in the Life at Sidwell Friends School

The Annual Funds Needs You

Books for the libraries, lab supplies for science classes, paints and brushes for art classes, teachers to assign homework – these are just some of the things that make up a day in the life at Sidwell Friends. The Annual Funds (Alumni Fund, Fair Share Fund, Grandparents Fund and Parents of Alumni and Friends Fund) provide the unrestricted monies that are needed for the School's daily operations. Just as important as the dollars, a high level of participation in the Annual Funds provides another kind of support for the School. It says you believe in our mission.

ALUMNI FUND

Alumni know first-hand the benefits of a Sidwell Friends education. The Alumni Fund is one way for alumni to express appreciation for their Sidwell education. Last year, 33 percent of alumni demonstrated their support of Sidwell Friends by contributing to the Alumni Fund. Thank you! So far this year, 21 percent of alumni have made a gift. Please help us reach our goal of reaching a record 34 percent participation by making a gift today. The campaign runs until June 30, 2007. Your gift does make a difference.

Reunion Classes Honor their Anniversary through Gifts to the Alumni Fund

This year several classes are marking the special occasion of their reunion with gifts to the Alumni Fund. The Class of 1957 is following in the footsteps of other 50th reunion classes by trying to raise $50,000 in honor of their 50th Reunion. As of April 1, 2007, they have already raised $34,212 toward this ambitious goal.

Members of the Class of 1987 are inspiring their classmates to mark the occasion of their 20th reunion with a challenge. If the class raises $15,000 from an impressive 65 percent of the class, a classmate will contribute an additional $15,000. This would make for the highest participation and dollars ever raised for a 20th reunion in SFS history.

FAIR SHARE FUND

The continued success of the Fair Share Fund is largely attributable to the hard work and dedication of a strong core of parent volunteers. These volunteers have led the way in showing their appreciation for the education their children receive at Sidwell Friends. Participation among parents is currently 78 percent, and we are on our way to our goal of 90 percent.

Between now and June 30, when the Fair Share campaign ends for the year, our volunteers will continue to work tirelessly to encourage their fellow parents to make a contribution to the School. Please know that all gifts are important, regardless of size.

DOLLARS FOR SCHOLARS UPDATE

Sidwell Friends School offers its students one of the most comprehensive and supportive financial aid programs available among independent schools. One in five students at SFS receives some level of financial aid. The Dollars for Scholars program contributes a significant amount to the School's financial aid budget. Alumni, current families, faculty and other friends of the School participate every year in the annual auctions, an alumni variety show, and tennis and golf tournaments. Next year the Next-to-New sale returns to the line-up of events. Look for more information throughout the year and join us in supporting the financial aid program at Sidwell Friends.

“We Hear You!”

And Here’s What You Wanted to Know

If you ask for an opinion, you’ll surely get one. This has never been truer than when we asked the Sidwell Friends community for advice on the Annual Funds and Dollars for Scholars fund-raising programs. First, our thanks to everyone who completed the on-line survey. We have already incorporated many of your suggestions into this year’s Annual Funds appeals, and your feedback will certainly be part of our future plans.

One response was loud and clear in the survey: there’s a good deal of confusion about the exact nature of the School’s fundraising programs. People want to know how Fair Share relates to the Annual Funds; or what Dollars for Scholars means; or what is Call Us Friends?

With that in mind, we offer a brief primer on the three programs that generate financial support for SFS:

• • •

The Annual Fund provides yearly, unrestricted operating support. It is comprised of four funds: the Alumni Fund (contributions from alumni), the Fair Share Fund (contributions from current parents), the Grandparent’s Fund, and the Parents of Alumni and Friends Fund. This newsletter includes lists of gifts to the Annual Funds thus far in our fiscal year. If you haven’t made your contribution yet, please make your gift by June 30th. So far, 21 percent of alumni and 78 percent of current parents have pledged.

• • •

Dollars for Scholars raises money for student financial aid. It does so with an annual calendar of fund-raising events: the Next to New sale, the on-line and live auctions, the golf and tennis tournaments and the Variety Show. Dollars for Scholars is completely separate from the Annual Fund program. Check your email and the SFS Web site for dates and times of events.

• • •

Call Us Friends is the current comprehensive campaign. This $56 million initiative is designed to support three goals: capital improvements, endowment and Annual Funds. Yes, the Annual Funds counts in the campaign. Any gift you make to the Annual Funds is included in the overall campaign goal. We must raise only another $12 million to complete the Call Us Friends campaign.

• • •

If you have any additional questions about the fundraising program at Sidwell Friends, please call the Office of Institutional Advancement at 202.537.8126.

Eyes and Ears on the Middle School

By early May, nearly 400 people had signed up for upcoming tours of the new Middle School. They'll follow about 900 others from government, education, design and non-profit groups who have explored the LEED platinum-rated building since January. Before that, countless numbers of middle school parents, alumni and other friends of SFS got to see the new school. It's all part of the School's desire to "walk the talk" and at the same time be a model for other organizations. SFS Archivist Lori Hardenbergh organizes the tours through and she's kept track of who has visited:

Schools: including school heads, trustees, teachers, and school architects from across the country; a number of student groups from D.C. area schools.

Architects: many architects, including representatives from the Committee on Education and the Committee on the Environment for D.C., both part of the American Institute of Architects.

Government officials: D.C. Mayor Adrian Fenty, with his Deputy Mayor for Education, his Chief of Staff and Chief of Staff for Legislative Affairs, and the D.C. Director of the Department of the Environment; several Montgomery County, Md., council members, and officials from the office of Congresswoman Doris Matsui.

Non-profits: National Wildlife Federation, Anacostia Watershed Society

Meanwhile, the Middle School is attracting media interest and picking up awards for its cutting-edge design. More information is available at www.sidwell.edu/greenbuilding.
